Cured by a Mistake.

It is not generally known that the recent recovery of Miss Lydia Jordan from dipththeria was the result of a fortunate accident. WINDOW FRAMES MOLDINGS, &c. Outside of a few, the family and a few friends the serious condition of the young lady was not generally known.

Miss Jordon is one of the most popular young women in Walnut Hills Society, and it is said she -will shortly marry a young Avondale man,

About two weeks ago she went to see a friend who was sick with diphtheria, and, unthinkingly, sat in the room for over an hour. In a few days she began to show ay mptoms of the disease, and it soon developed that she had it in its most virulent form. The family physician, Dr. Disney, began

NAILS LIME CEMENT CALCINED PLASTER, to lose hope, so strong a hold had the disease taken upon her system. Miss Jordan kept getting worse and worse, until finally the doctor found, to his utter consternation, that a false membrane was forming in her throat. This is regarded as the worst possible form of the disease, and one which is absolutely incurable.

The rapid growth of the membrane was attended with increased difficulty in breathing. It was gradually closing the air passages. The doctor informed Mr. and Mrs. Jordan that the struggle was over, and the disease had wen.

The unhappy parents were almost wild with grief. The girl had been an especial favorite with them on account of her handsome face and sunny disposition. It hardly seemed real to them that she could be lying on her death-bed, with her young life slowly fleeing away with each laborious

The doctor said that in a few hours all would be over. Already the membrane had grown over the throat so that only a hole the size of a large needle remained.

The girl was lying with her head thrown ack. The veins in her forehead were swollen, and her face was fiery red. In every curve of her form, in the clutching of her lingers, one could read the ngony she was enduring.

Dr. Disney had been very fond of Miss

Lydia, and seeing that nothing more could be done to left a phial of medicine "to be used when the breathing had about stopped," and started away. He fully expected nev r to see the girl again until she lay in near the bed among a lot of other phials of similar size and shape. The father and toother sat close by the bedside of their Citron, 25c; Dinner Nuts, mixed, 15c. All new dying child. Soon the sound of the breath-ing grew louder and harsher. The writhing of the frame showed that the end was very near. Mrs. Jordan started up, took from the ta-ble what she thought was the last phial the doctor had left, and, measuring out a dose, poured it quickly down her daughter's throat.

The effect was instantaneous and horrible The girl writhed and quivered as she had not before. Her finger nails tore into her flesh. Her face grew black, and her wide, staring eyes fairly startell from their sock-No scream issued from the lips. was the personification of mute agony. This only lasted for a minute.

Suddenly there was a sharp, cracking -ound. The girl's body lifted itself from the bed. There was a terrible gasp, a groap, and then a fit of racking coughing. The swollen veins began to subside, the black color of the face changed to a dull red, the eyes slowly closed, and the girl began to breathe again. White this was happening and the girl was at the very height of her suffering, the mother looked at the bottle whose contents had produced this terrible effect. To her horror she discovered that, by mistake, she had given the girl a large dose of aqua ammonia, a sufficient quantity to have suffocated a well person. The doctor was immediately sent for, and when he arrived was told what had been done. To his astonishment he found the girl resting easy and looking far better than she had for a week. Her lips and the lin-ing of her mouth were burned by the ammonia, as her throat must have been also. An examination into Miss Jordan's condi-tion showed that although she was very weak, yet her throat was comparatively clear and there was every indication of cer tain recovery. On the cover in front of her, the doctor found the false membrane which had been the cause of all the trouble, and which the girl had ejected in that last paroxyem .- Cincinnaii Times-Star. ADVICE TO MOTHERS.
